Bioeconomy Youth Debate #3

Monday, November 18th, 2024

Online: 14:00 – 16:00 CET

The bioeconomy is crucial for the future, with collaboration between scientists, experts, businesses, and policymakers. The younger generation has talent and passion, but they aren't included in decision-making enough. The GenB project debates aim to give young people a platform to express their ideas, envision a better bioeconomy-led world, and help influence policymakers like the European Commission towards a sustainable future.

Who is it for:

- Member-based communities and initiatives focusing on empowering the young generations to take the lead for the green/sustainable transition.
- Young students and professionals with passion for sustainability and the bioeconomy.
- Teachers and educators wanting to transmit and inspire towards sustainability and the bioeconomy.
- Creators and artists looking for ways to integrate the sustainability and the bioeconomy art or content.
- Advocacy and human right groups focused on policy, social and other issues.
- Press and information portals focusing on topics related to sustainability, bioeconomy, policy and human rights – or similar.

How it works:

- Representatives of each topic will share their vision, mission and exchange good practices.
- All the participants will exchange their thoughts, ideas or doubts through the interactive sessions using a MIRO Board.
